In The Hangover Part II, after the plane crashes, the guys go into the water. For some reason, the only one of them that survives is Brad Pitt. In the first film, when they get back to Thailand, one of the characters looks at the plane, and sees the name "Hurley" written on it. From what I can tell, the plane itself was not a blue ocean, but a greenish ocean. Why, after crashing in the ocean, is it that the only survivor is Brad Pitt? A: (SPOILERS) In the first movie, the plane is a commercial flight from Las Vegas to Thailand. It is never shown to the viewer in any detail, but it is reasonably safe to assume that it is a large commercial aircraft. Large aircraft like this are designed to land on water, and are equipped with special windows which allow a pilot to land on water. These windows in the side of the aircraft are fairly sophisticated and capable of surviving significant impact forces. In the film the plane crashes into the ocean, and the impact is sufficient to break the windows, which are then punctured by the propellers. As the air from the aircraft is displaced, it is no longer rushing at the normal speed in the wind tunnel, and is entering the cold air of the ocean, where the air flow decreases in speed, and is also significantly reduced in volume. Brad Pitt, being a professional actor with stunt training and extensive bodywork, is able to survive the crash and the impact with the water because of his own training, physical preparation and acting ability. It is clear that he has also trained with kung fu (cf. his fight with Chow), and that
