Project Hospital v1.0.14303.exe.. So, yesterday i've been trying to download the newest version of Project Hospital v1.0.14303.exe. . It's been like 10hrs now of downloading the game and still no luck. So today, i went to download the v1.0.14303.exe on a different PC. . And i got the.exe but I've noticed that the.exe was playing a different game than the one i downloaded. . I thought I had downloaded the same game but it turns out it was a totally different game. . I searched google for the downloader i used and then I saw that the downloader that i used was for a game named Project Hospital v1.0.14303.exe. . So if you downloaded it, it may be a.exe file to a game named Project Hospital v1.0.14303.exe. . I hope you can help me out. Thank you.. find_if_not ... Returns the first element in the list, firstly satisfying the predicate, secondly taking a default value. and find_if ... Returns the first element in the list, firstly satisfying the predicate, secondly taking a default value. Is the only difference that find_if_not returns only the first element whereas find_if does not? A: No, the documentation is unclear on purpose and in a way misleading (the documentation for find_if and find_if_not describes what happens, the doc for find_if_not describes what it does). The difference between find_if and find_if_not is the presence of the second argument. find_if_not takes a second argument and applies a default if the element is not found, whereas find_if does not take a second argument, it returns a partial match of the first element, or None in case the element is not found. If you find it confusing, use find_if instead of find_if_not. Here is a short example: scala> val list = List(1, 2, 3) list: List[Int] = List(1, 2, 3) scala> list.find(1 == _) res0: Option[Int] = Some(1) scala> list.find_if(1 == _) 2d92ce491b
