A spokesman for the alliance said it was informed by the US Navy on Monday that a US naval surveillance aircraft was intercepted by two Russian military aircraft over the Baltic Sea on Sunday. "All of the aircraft were operating in international airspace," a NATO spokesman told Reuters news agency. "We will not comment on the nature of the intercepts and the military activity, but note that it was in accordance with international law." Russia's Defence Ministry later said that the US aircraft had entered its airspace. "Two Russian MiG-29 fighter aircraft were scrambled to intercept a US Navy P-8A Poseidon aircraft. The American aircraft was flying above the Baltics in a highly provocative manner," the ministry said in a statement. The planes "intercepted" the US plane on a "24-hour alert basis" and were sent to escort the aircraft, it said. The Pentagon later confirmed the incident. "We can confirm that two Russian aircraft intercepted a US military aircraft over the Baltic Sea, in international airspace, Sunday afternoon
