Nebo Cross Nebo Cross is a science fiction novel by David Weber and Steve White, first published in 1995. It is the second novel in the Honor Harrington series. The book was part of the Tricentennial celebrations of the United States, and was published in the first part of the United States bicentennial celebrations in 1996, in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the United States' founding. Plot summary In the novel, HMS Jebesen encounters an alien spacecraft, which is on a collision course with Earth. The ship is sent to intercept the craft and study it, and the only way the Jebesen can escape the craft's destructive energy beams is to shut off the engines and fire its own beams at the alien. This, however, will send the ship into a ten-year voyage into deep space, out of communication range of Earth. HMS Jebesen's Captain, Commander Honor Harrington, has not yet received orders to intercept the alien ship. While the ship is in transit, she encounters a mysterious stranger on board ship, who warns the ship that its captain is about to be executed. Honor accepts this stranger's advice and assumes command of the ship. The alien ship is identified as an AAnn beacon, a spacecraft the aliens were creating to assist them in traveling through space, but now have used to find the humans. The AAnn assume that humans have discovered a new species of AAnn, and are planning to experiment on them. The AAnn believe humans have learned how to use the technology on the alien ship, and are using it to attack the AAnn. The AAnn need to destroy the ship before this occurs
