A 48-year-old man was diagnosed with lung adenocarcinoma. He was admitted to our hospital because of chest discomfort. Medication for hypertension and dyslipidemia had been started one year prior to admission. He had smoked 45 pack-years and started taking umeclidinium/vilanterol in combination with docetaxel as a first-line therapy for lung adenocarcinoma. His performance status (PS) was 20 due to grade 3 of pain and dyspnea. Chest radiographs showed a mass-like shadow in the right middle lung field. The serum CEA level was markedly elevated (17.2 ng/ml). Although CT scans showed tumor progression, and PET-CT confirmed tumor invasion, the patient refused surgery. He was treated with S-1 and was scheduled to receive 2 courses of chemotherapy (S-1 80 mg/m²/day, for 1 month, followed by a 2-week rest). He was asymptomatic the first course. However, chest discomfort and dyspnea developed in the second course, and CT scans and PET-CT showed the tumor growing. His PS deteriorated to 10. Chemotherapy was discontinued, and the patient died 6 days later. Autopsy findings demonstrated tumor invasion of the mediastinum and diaphragm, with no signs of metastases in other organs. The serum CEA level was 2.2 ng/ml, and the other tumor markers were all within the normal ranges. The concentrations of CK, LDH, and KL-6 were elevated. Histological findings showed tumor invasion of the mediastinum and diaphragm. S-1 was therefore considered to have caused his cardiotoxicity.Hoot Hoot: Five hundred million more people will get cyberspace updates Five hundred million more people will be recipients of an Internet update "within a year" and another 300 million within five years, according to Eric Schmidt, chairman of Google, at a TED conference.

In this photo taken March 14, 2011, Christian Communications Director Billy Graham lays a wreath on the grave of Dr. Bernard Nathanson, who helped write the last abortion law to be overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court, in Rest Haven Cemetery in Park City, Utah. Nathanson, 93, and Dr. George Tiller, 70, are the two doctors who carried out abortions in a 3-year-old case in which the U.S. Supreme Court in 1981 upheld the hospital-abortion law, known as HB 2222, which made performing a third-trimester abortion in a hospital a felony. Nathanson said Saturday, Feb. 24, 2011 in a statement that he believes HB 2222 "no longer serves a legitimate state purpose." (AP Photo/Rick Bowmer) That law, in effect in Utah since 1981, made performing a third-trimester abortion in a hospital a felony, even for a medical necessity. It was passed as a health measure, but the Supreme Court said it didn't conflict with Roe v. Wade. Nathanson said Saturday that his religious beliefs led him to try to help women who might be in the last stages of pregnancy and experiencing severe medical complications from a missed or stalled pregnancy. He said he told his wife he would need a surgical suite where he could perform abortions at the end of a third trimester. They performed the last one in their own home. "In an odd way, I feel a responsibility that I have not been able to live up to for the past 35 years," he said. "I am ashamed of this law. I had such respect for the law. I have been a member of the legal system my whole life and believed that the law was just." Nathanson, a long-time resident of Utah, said he no longer considers himself a Mormon. He noted that one of the unofficial Mormon commandments is, "Thou shalt not kill." Nathanson said that he regretted not having joined the Baptist church to which he was born. He also said he couldn't explain his moral lapse and attributed it to the stresses of a changing America. "I know all of the reasons people have for killing in general," he said. " 1cb139a0ed
