Cabot KeyManger is a small and fast program for Windows, that will act as a 'keyboard extender' for applications and your desktop. Simply install KeyManger, and you'll be able to assign combinations of keystrokes to any number of predefined actions, including opening your favorite applications, starting MS Internet Explorer, launching your email program, or opening documents. KeyManger automatically records the keystrokes you make, and stores them for later use. You can then run KeyManger at any time and recall any of the previously-recorded actions simply by pressing the appropriate keys. In addition to standard keyboard shortcuts, KeyManger includes many other features, including multiple keystroke options, a command history, editable keystroke mappings, "Hotkeys" - a built-in virtual keyboard that enables you to type long strings of characters in one stroke, and a "Dial" system, which lets you assign actions to the numeric keypad of your computer. KeyManger is fully customizable, so you can use any combination of shortcuts you want. For example, you can assign your application's "start" key as the combination for launching your email program, and then remember which keystroke you use to open each individual window in your favorite email program. KeyManger also offers a "Record" option, which enables you to type in any application (or on your desktop) using your computer's keyboard without having to use a mouse. KeyManger automatically records the keystrokes you make, and stores them for later use. You can then re-use the recorded keystrokes at any time to enter text, navigate the Internet, or perform other functions. KEYMACRO is compatible with Windows 2000/XP/Vista. Included with KeyManger is the capability to create custom hotkey combinations, and share these with other users. KeyManger includes a "Quick Launch" panel that lets you add links to applications, documents, and the Windows desktop. You can add links to the most frequently-used applications and documents, then assign any keystroke combination to launch the application or start the document. Using KeyManger is very easy. You can use it as a keyboard extender for your applications or desktop, or you can create your own combination of keystrokes for starting any application or document. The program is well-documented, and includes a help menu, a Help window, and hotkey/shortcut reference lists. KeyM 1d6a3396d6

Q: Get multiple values from a listbox in a label I have a listbox like [['Bud', '1301-24', 'Bond Portrayal', 'X'], ['Conner', '1301-24', 'Doctor who', 'Y'], ['Kirk', '1301-24', 'Doctor Who', 'X']] I have a label with multiple values. I'm trying to get the values from the listbox and display it in the label, but I can't seem to get it to work. Here's the code I have so far:

lblQuestion.text = ListBox1.Text

lblQuestion.text is the label. The above code gives me the error:
