1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a card connector, and more particularly to a card connector which has an ejection device which ejects a card from the inside of the housing.
2. Description of Related Art A variety of connecting cards and the like, which are inserted into a card connector of a mobile

phone, are now available and many of these cards need to be removed. In order to facilitate the removal of a card, a card ejector device may be disposed at the periphery of the connector so that the user can insert a card forcibly into the connector and, when a card is fully inserted, push the card from the card connector. To meet the requirements of some newer designs, the card connector may have an ejecting function and the ejecting device may be installed in the interior of the connector. A force applying direction of the ejecting device on the card is in the direction of inserting the card into the card connector, such that the force is applied to the card and then a card is ejected. However, during the ejecting process, the card is pushed forwards to move the card connector and, during this process, the card is in contact with the housing. Thus, if the housing is made of a material that is conductive and prone to fatigue failure, the card, the card connector or the ejecting device may be damaged during the movement of the card connector./** * * Copyright

---

WikiLeaks may be the most influential website on the Web today. But that doesn't mean the site's founder Julian Assange is above the law. The Associated Press reports that Swedish authorities want to interview Assange in connection with a rape investigation that is currently under way in Sweden. WikiLeaks has gone to great lengths to downplay any connection with its founder to the allegations of rape against Assange, pointing out that they are investigating a complaint from a lone woman. They are calling it an “inappropriate investigation of Mr.

Assange” and are confident that he “will ultimately be cleared.” There has been speculation that WikiLeaks will turn over the emails to AP journalists to help their case. Critics have called on WikiLeaks to turn over a list of all the documents it has in its possession to Swedish authorities, however WikiLeaks has a long history of standing on principle and refusing to do so. After WikiLeaks was fined US$40,000 over its publication of the internal e-mails of Spanish bank Banco Madrid after an investigation into the activities of the bank's customers there, Assange said that the site will no longer pay such penalties. WikiLeaks says that it has already produced evidence that all seven of the bank's executives who were under investigation had never been party to a single illegal act, and that the bank (or its agents) had falsified documents by injecting code to hide their true authors. They say that in the future, they will not turn over any documents to the government even if those documents can be used to gain legal benefits. WikiLeaks has also angered U.S. authorities by releasing thousands of classified documents from the

---

American government. The documents include secret internal documents from the Pentagon that explain how the US military forces its private contractors to carry out battlefield tactics, revealing the inner workings
