What's new in this version: – Fixed crash when recording from the Flash player. – Fixed bug which could crash the app. – Update the exception report function. – Fixed a bug with the search term entry. In the previous version we provided the best legal sound recording software for Mac OS X. Many users asked us to provide them the legal apps for Windows as well, so here you are. The Windows version is ready. This software allows you to record audio from internet radio stations and convert your recorded audio into any format you want. We only ask that you give us your thanks for this resource. You can do this by sending us a mail with your testimonies or by downloading and trying the software for yourself. It's a tool that is very simple to use. First of all you need to input the website URL of the radio station you wish to record, and then you simply click on "Record". The app will then search for the "audio stream" of the station on the internet, and will automatically record the one which you are currently listening to. When the program finishes recording you can download the audio file into a MP3, WAV or AIF (Apple iPod) format. You can download the software to your computer from our "Downloads" section. You can use this tool as a server to record radio stations in your area too. In order to do that you need to input the URL of the station you wish to record, and then you just have to press the "Connect" button. What's New in the?

Download content from the web The software allows you to search for videos and audio files over the internet and download them directly from the search results. Start to download the file With just one click, you can start downloading the requested content. All done! Choose your output format and resolution The software automatically detects the correct format and resolution for the requested media files. Final touch The application also offers a few settings options. It includes a help page as well as the possibility to make a direct download link to the desired media file, instead of its embeddable link. All in all, DownTube is a quite useful application that does not require too much effort to get started with. Posters from films, graphics for advertising campaigns, media files that were meant to be downloaded, but were just not added to a playlist are all able to be found on the internet. However, this is not always a pleasure to find. In the past, a large amount of different websites only allowed you to look for files, but did not always include a direct download option. Those times are over. Nowadays, almost every movie, music and media file that one could wish for is available for downloading and listening to. A helpful application like DownTube is a useful addition to the pocket. This application will scan web pages to find out the video and audio files. It will then automatically choose which files it can find and download. This means you do not have to hunt for these files manually. You simply open the application and let it run its course, so to speak. Details This application downloads content from video and audio files from the web. Features No restrictions on content types, as long as they are supported Automatic searches of content Support for standard web browsers Multilingual, fully automated installations Advanced web searching
