For the basics of using Photoshop, watch the YouTube tutorial called Adobe Photoshop CS6. Figure 11-3: Using the Content-Aware Fill tool makes it easy to correct blemishes, such as this one on an image of a 1920s-era store. Image courtesy of AIB.com, www.aib.com.au Canva.com Canva.com is the new kid on the block. It focuses more on free images than on editing, but it does offer online design templates that you can modify with custom-made images or photographs. You can create and share your designs on many social media sites, such as Facebook, Twitter, and Pinterest. Online photo-editing software Online photo-editing software is available to many photographers and those interested in learning how to edit their own photos. Here are a few options: Adobe Photoshop Express: A free online photo-editing program that enables you to create GIFs, create a collage with your images, and more. (www.photoshop.com/express) PicMonkey: This free online photo-editing software features a variety of photo-editing tools, including a collage tool, a healing brush, and a reshaping tool. (www.picmonkey.com) Pixlr: Pixlr is similar to PicMonkey and GIMP. It is free to use and comes with some cool effects, including the ability to warp the photo to a fun new shape. (www.pixlr.com) And it's not just for photo retouching Photo retouching isn't the only possible application for Photoshop. There are far too many possibilities to mention here, but a few that might be worth mentioning include the following: Photoshop Elements: This free, downloadable photo-editing program has most of the same features found in Photoshop but in a lower-cost package that is ideal for beginners or for those with limited funds. (www.adobe.com/creativesuite/photoshop-elements.html) Paint Shop Pro: This powerful photo-editing program features several different layer styles and the ability to create and edit vector graphics. Plus, it has over 200 Photoshop plug-ins for improving images. (www.corel.com/product/paint-shop-pro)

Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.3) [32/64bit] [Latest 2022]

Following the Washington Post's recent breaking of the story of a Russian banker with ties to the Kremlin who was appointed as a top State Department official while business ties to the Russian government remained, former Obama administration officials are suggesting that there may be more going on. As The Hill reported Wednesday, the newspaper said Russian financier William H. Priestap helped former FBI head James Comey draft a statement announcing a conclusion in the FBI's investigation of whether anyone affiliated with the Trump campaign conspired with the Russian government to help Donald Trump win the 2016 election. In addition to the claim, which has been pushed by the left for a good year now, the paper said Priestap was also tasked with a series of bank fraud investigations in Brooklyn, New York. Priestap, the Post said, "helped to draft the statement announcing the closure of the FBI investigation into whether anyone associated with Trump's presidential campaign colluded with Russia during the 2016 election, according to people familiar with the matter." The former administration officials are saying it's possible that this is not just a coincidence. Former Obama administration official Jesselyn Radack told the Post that since Priestap is "a monster," he has "clear ties to the Kremlin." "[We] would not be surprised to see the outcome of the Trump-Russia probe incentivized by the Kremlin. It is convenient for the Kremlin that the appointee helps push the 'no collusion' narrative," said Radack. Priestap was also listed as a special assistant to Comey during his one-year tenure in the post. Former Obama administration official Michael R. Bromwich said Priestap "appeared to be the go-to person for Comey." "In fact, when he delivered the Comey letter to Trump about the Flynn investigation, he was presented as a mole from the Kremlin," Bromwich said in the report. "It really makes you wonder whether he was the mole." In 2013, The Daily Caller News Foundation's Chuck Ross reported that Priestap's former company was fined $6 million for helping a Russian oligarch launder money. In a Washington Post op-ed from last month, Hillary Clinton wrote that "so many questions have been raised about Donald Trump's Russia ties." ♦

[The use of neodymium-doped yttrium aluminum garnet and holmium-doped yttrium aluminum garnet laser in the treatment of port wine stains]. The treatment of port wine stains was the first case in Poland using holmium and neodymium-doped yttrium aluminum garnet laser. It makes possible to achieve very good localised destruction of telangiectasias. The neodymium-doped YAG laser has been applied in 41 patients. The first successful photocoagulation was performed in a 34-year-old woman, with chronic stable ulcerated port wine stains. The laser was applied with a Nd:YAG-Laser Q-switched PASCAL (OPTAIL) 4.9J/cm<sup>2</sup>, laser diode 615 nm. No heavy side effects of the treatment have been observed. to state the relevant facts, and what they are. It is not true that the charge of the Court was confusing or insufficient, but was rather a clear statement of the necessary facts to be proved." In People v. Coyle, 2 Cal.App.2d 287 (37 PaCal.2d 1028), the court stated at page 291: "The arguments to the jury are fragmentary and uncertain in some instances, but it is our opinion that they covered the material points of the case thoroughly and fairly, and were not likely to confuse the jury or to mislead them." It is clear that the jury were not misled nor confused by the argument of counsel for appellant. The argument of Mr. Harris, argued before the charge and that of Mr. O'Brien, argued on the motion for new trial, are in all material particulars the same. The charge given was clear and concise, not only stating the law applicable to the case, but defining the various definitions of malice. It does not admit of argument that the jury in the matter of malice, committed an error of law. (See People v. Clark, 125 Cal.App. 412 [14 PaCal.2d 1038].) *365 [5] From an examination of the argument of Mr. Harris to the jury, it is evident that he was attempting to produce the thought that appellant's excuse, if believed by the jury, was a good reason why appellant might be guilty of some lesser offense. He had no concern with the defense of insanity or intoxication as these facts were fully covered in the instructions
