It is reported that the limited supply of fresh water is the main reason for the lack of sustainable agriculture and urban consumption in arid and semi-arid regions of the world. Currently, the available options for addressing this problem are mainly focused on utilization of alternative water sources including seawater and wastewater. This present work explores the feasibility of using hemicellulose hydrolysate (HH) derived lipids for improving the quality of double distilled water (DDW) in severely water stressed region of the world, namely, drylands of India. Lipid productivity was found to vary significantly from 18.75 to 35.67  $\mu\text{g/g}$  COD. It was established that HH used for lipid production can be an alternate source of natural DDW. The fractions of  $\text{CH}_2\text{O}$  and  $\text{COOH}$  present in the HH were identified as non-biodegradable organic matter that needs to be removed before disposing off or recycling them for use as the source of nutrients for the growth of algae or other aquatic microorganisms. Bioaccumulation of heavy metals by various microalgae was observed. The wastewater quality is monitored by the physico-chemical characteristics of the DDW and the microbial population was found to be improved after bio-flocculation of the HH. A preliminary phytotoxicity study suggests that HH might be a better option than drinking water for plants in water stressed regions of the world.

Q: Compatibility issues when using VBO and display lists in OpenGL Is it possible to use display lists with VBO's in OpenGL? My understanding is that the VBO's are just stored in GPU memory, and that the display list is used to transfer data to the GPU. Can I use them together? A: OpenGL display lists have nothing to do with VBOs or what is in the GPU memory. Those are separate concepts, and display lists are not related to VBOs at all. Display lists are merely "instructions" to your GPU for how to draw a model. They're basically a way to "stream" textured quads into your GPU. They're usually more for debugging and creating test models than for high-performance. VBOs do not fit into this concept at all. They're specifically for putting a collection of data on the GPU (e.g. arrays of vertices). Display lists
