Upon waking and logging on, I found the HANDBAG approved "Gluten Free" pop tarts that was in the mail waiting for me. As always, the first food is the hardest. I opened the bag and melted over the contents. They're easy to make and easy to enjoy. I see why they're so popular. They're kinda like a campfire treat or a "no mess" fire biscuit. Better than packaged gluten free prepackaged snacks. I baked up a 3 pack batch and ate three. One for breakfast, and two in between each gluten free meal. The second batch I froze and plan to nibble on later. I'm spending the day with family and friends who are recovering from illness, including viral pneumonia and the flu. Soon, it'll be time for visitors to return home. I'm looking forward to sharing a few treats with them and to helping the housework get done. When I wake up tomorrow, I'll be surprised if I'm not out of breath. Once the pop tarts are gone, I'll be making some baked cinnamon donuts. And I'll be making some cupcakes. Comments I am sorry to hear that you are feeling under the weather. I hope you feel better soon! The gluten free pop tarts sound delish! We're going to do some baking in my house for a party this weekend and I'm going to make sure to snag these ones. 09e8f5149f
