Q: MVC Razor, jquery dropdown, dropdownlist fire off same thing I have two dropdowns, one from the server and one from the client, both with the same ID. I have a javascript event to perform the change on the client side, but on submit it fires the server side also. I use the model to bind my data, and then I do use jQuery to update the dropdowns. The ID's on both are the same. Here's the razor code @Html.DropDownList("CountryCode", Model.countries, "--Select--", new { @class = "form-control" }) Select Country The jquery event $('#CountryCode').on('change', function () { alert($(this).val()); }); How do I prevent this from firing on submit? Laser can be utilized in vitreous surgery in various ways, including retinal detachments, tractional retinal breaks, epiretinal membranes and retinal detachment. Get ready to see more of Hollywood on the Sunset Strip this fall. CBS Television Studios and Warner Bros. Television have just struck a deal with Hollywood magazine to bring their show-business roster full circle and run a digital magazine in Hollywood. Hollywood will begin distributing the magazine in January 2013. The publication will look like a national entertainment weekly for a younger audience, much like how the Us Weekly went from a "haughty" national magazine to more personable. "We have a proven track record as a digital magazine publisher and we have a strong entertainment company like Warner Bros. behind us," said Hollywood's director of digital publishing, Syren Younger. "We will be able to bring the magazine to life." Hollywood's senior vice president of content, Nadja Alexander, said that the magazine will be "celebrating the arts and entertainment industry." In addition to the monthly magazine, Hollywood will also produce its own movie and TV content. This includes a sitcom in development with Warner Bros. TV and a reality television series to air on the CW. 321 U.S. 214 (1944) SOUTHERN UNION GAS CO. v. HINDS, CHAIRMAN, STATE TAX COMMISSION OF GEORGIA. No. 315. Supreme Court of United States.
