(CID syndrome) in a patient with neonatal T-lymphoblastic leukemia:
case report]. The anaplastic anaemia (A-E syndrome) associated with erythroleukaemia (CID syndrome) in a 2-month-old infant is described.

cytosine arabinoside (ARA-C) and cyclophosphamide (CY) during 14 days. This treatment resulted in a hematological improvement in spite of the presence of resistant erythroleukaemia. However, the ARA-C treatment was complicated with severe and persistent liver dysfunction. When a second ARA-C treatment was planned, the liver dysfunction had reached a critical state. This being, radical surgery was indicated. A liver transplantation was performed simultaneously.
There was no evidence of haematologic or clinical relapse after one
