Recently I built my own version of MinGW's CMake, M2Cmake, using an LLVM template and Google's CMake expertise. I have two questions: How does M2Cmake detect which version of the C compiler the user is using? I need to have a static library of my project

Meng Hu is a creative person with more than 10 years of experience in design field. These skills include Graphic Design, UI/UX Design, Photoshopping, Writing Service☐ Web Scraping and More. I just purchased the app and spent a while with it. While it's not perfect it is the best ping you can get without a separate ping router of some sort. It is simple enough and just takes the time I would have spent at a physical router and beats its crappy options. It's a bit unintuitive and possibly could be way more easy but it does what is needed and well. A minor quibble is the output is saved in a text format. This could be improved by saving it to a csv file or delimited format of your choosing. I will be using this app daily. This is an easy way to get your porting done without stressing over the software. If you find yourself needing to ping a huge list of IP addresses then this is your app. It's simple enough and works well. The UI can be customized for greater or lesser detail. It's all about what you need to do and what you do for a living. There's a bug or two but I had no problem with them. If you take the time to customize the app to your liking then you will have the best ping tool on your desktop. If you're on a mobile device and just need to send a few numbers you're good to go. This is an app to die for. The moment it works its way into your life your life will be so much better. For a few dollars the app can help the countless people who are in need of faster, better networking. I'm not going to go in great detail about the app but its worth a look if your in the market for something that does its job. If you need a simple and dirty ping app this is the way to go. Good job user or developers. I liked the output file format. It's got a lot of potential and the interface makes it a winner. In a word, I love this app. I personally use it when testing my sites. As mentioned below, you can easily search what number you need to test. You can also filter from any country/region (US, UK, etc.) and if you need more than one region you can add them all. Once you're done with your tests simply send the app the text you've created and in like 3 seconds or
