When you edit a layer, you open the layer dialog box and select the Type tool. If you select the Select tool, you can select an area to edit that layer, such as a color or a shape. In addition to layers, Photoshop has other tools that you use for editing and manipulating images. Those tools include the following: Healing brush: The Healing Brush is a tool that lets you select the pixels around a selected area. When you select a pixel with the Healing Brush, Photoshop lets you adjust the shape of the selection. Eraser: The Eraser tool lets you remove the contents of a layer. Direct Selection tool: The Direct Selection tool enables you to select or deselect a single pixel or a range of pixels. The selection is box-shaped when using this tool, so it may be hard to see the image that is selected. Magic Wand: This tool is used to select pixels that are the same color as the tool, turning those pixels into selections for further editing or applying effects to the selected areas. (I cover the Magic Wand in Book I Chapter 7.) Pinching or scaling the image and the Canvas works. If you use the Pinch tool, a box forms at the center of the image and when you release the tool, the box changes its size proportionally to the distance you moved the tool from the center. If you use the Scale tool to resize the image, the canvas adjusts to the new size. The Grid tool allows you to use a grid system for aligning and positioning objects in the image. You can also use the Guides tool to use the grid system as a guide for where to place your artwork. Filters: Filters add depth and special effects, such as blurs, paints, and textures, to an image. Masking enables you to create layer masks for an image. (A layer mask is simply a checkbox with an X in its box; the box means that the pixels in that layer are transparent, and the area without the box is opaque.) This allows you to selectively erase part of an image. You can also use them to select areas of one layer and hide them (make them transparent) or apply effects or filters to those areas without affecting the rest of the image. You can adjust the shape, size, or opacity of the mask using the tools that I cover in the preceding list. The bottom line is that for the most part, learning Photoshop involves

Yesterday was a beautiful, even sunny spring day in DC. The local farmers are celebrating the end of winter and since I live just a few blocks away from the Capitol Building, I decided to just walk around and take some pictures. On my way back to my car, I happened upon the office of Nancy Pelosi and she was the only person in the lobby as she waited to be called into the House session. Democrats seemed to have a lot of standing around, yawning and slouching on the floor as Nancy Pelosi led them to the House session. [EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of the best American politicians and symbols of womanhood ever! It may even be the best since Betty Ford who, despite all the chauvinistic arrogance of the times, was also a perfect lady in every sense of the word]HOUSTON (Reuters) - Chevron Corp CVX.N announced a $15.3 billion takeover of Anadarko Petroleum Corp APC.N as part of a $40 billion push by a group of U.S. energy companies to purchase shale assets to cut costs. The deal values Anadarko at about $48.93 a share, a premium of 10.6 percent to the company's Friday close of $46.95 and up from $43 per share, based on Chevron's closing price on Wednesday. Shares of Chevron, based in San Francisco, rose 2.9 percent to $83.60 in extended trading on the New York Stock Exchange on Friday, making it the most valuable U.S. oil company. Chevron also increased its $13.3 billion bid to acquire BHP Billiton Ltd's 10.4 percent stake in Anadarko Petroleum Corp APC.N and $1.3 billion bid to buy Nabors Industries Ltd's NBR.N 66.3 percent stake in Anadarko Petroleum, the two companies said in a joint statement. But Anadarko is now only seeking cash in Chevron's bid to acquire its assets, and is considering a counter-bid for at least some of Chevron's bid for BHP's shares, the company said. Anadarko said it was looking to sell its 15 percent stake in a $9.75 billion Gulf of Mexico project known as Blue Whale. It had previously said it was selling a smaller stake in the project. Chevron said
